My dear Sir

M. Brunetiere told me the other day that you had been asking for my address. I was so sorry not to have thought of asking him for yours, so as to give myself the pleasure of calling upon you. I intended to write to Mr Brunetiere, when I received your kind note. I shall be delighted to lunch with you to-morrow at 12 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Believe me, dear Sir, with best thanks,

Yours truly

Dear Mr Gilman

How kind of you not to have forgotten my existence and to have shown me your remembrance in such a nice way! your present is quite charming. There is so much in the small space of the little book I have received.

It is a sort of a moral monument to the memory of your great president! It will have for me the additional value of reminding me of the pleasure I had in meeting you. I hope I shall have that pleasure again here - in my country.

Be kind enough to remember me to Mrs Gilman and the Misses Gilman, and believe me
Yours sincerely S Bikelas
